Jury To Study Accusations Of Assault, Battery

Four Circleville policemen were bound to Pickaway County grand jury in the court of Magistrate Oscar Root Tuesday on accusations of assault and battery. A former member of the force, named in connection with the same case, has yet to be served with a warrant.

Affidavits against the five were filed by Maynard Keaton of Circleville as result of a series of incidents which allegedly occurred here during this year's Pumpkin Show. One of the five, Herbert Weaver, has since resigned from the Circleville police department and is now reported to be working in New York City.

The remaining four held for jury action are:

Police Sgt. Alvah Shasteen, Officers Ludwell Mills and Russ Ogan and Special Officer John Lockard. All four are free on personal appearance bonds amounting to $500 in each case.

IT HAD BEEN reported erroneously that two accusations of assault and battery had been filed against Shasteen, Mills and Ogan are the two officers facing two accusations each, only one being filed against each of the other three men.

The four present members of the police department waived reading of the accusations during preliminary hearing in magistrate's court Tuesday afternoon. Sheriff Charles T. Radcliff, who served warrants on the four, said the warrant against Weaver was to be served later.

In holding the four Tuesday for jury action, Magistrate Root commented that the case placed him in a "most embarrassing" position. Root "has been named to take over the position of city safety director under Mayor Robert E. Hedges in the new city administration, which takes over municipal affairs at midnight Thursday. Supervision of the police department will be one of Root's main duties as head of the safety branch.

Ohio Firm's Artillery Shell Pact Cancelled

CLEVELAND (AP)—As the result of an investigation which began nearly two months ago, an ordinance contract for about $8 million worth of artillery shells has been cancelled at a Bryant Heater plant here.

The Cleveland Ordnance District announced the cancellation of a contract for "the 90 millimeter high explosive shell, T91."

The investigation was ordered when defective shells were found in shipments to the Army. Bryant Heater, a division of Affiliated Gas Equipment, Inc., employs about 300 workers.

The ordinance announcement hinted some legal action might be taken. It said the contract was cancelled "because of alleged contract and statutory violations, and considerations of government action in connection therewith are now pending in the Departments of the Army and Justice."

The action was termed "undeserved and unjustified" by James A. Hughes, general manager of Bryant Heater. He cited the company's record of producing more than $1 million worth of defense goods since 1941 and said the company and employees had cooperated fully with an investigation "to fix the blame and punish the few employees who took it upon themselves not to follow standard inspection procedures."

Cancellation of the contract, he said, will mean elimination of the jobs of nearly 300 persons.

The ordinance district said it is continuing to reinspect the shells already delivered.

O'Neill To Seek His 3rd Term

COLUMBUS (AP)—Atty. Gen. C. William O'Neill, 37, Marietta, today announced his candidacy for re-election to a third term on the Republican ticket.

The former speaker of the Ohio House said his office successfully disposed of 11,000 cases in the last year, more than during any previous comparable period. He also issued 3,400 opinions and collected more than $7 million for the state.

Mayor Amey's Auto Smeared With Paint, Tires Punctured

Circleville's Mayor Ed Amey, who leaves office Friday after a two-year term, has created many friends in the community by his actions at the city's helm.

He also has some enemies, it would seem.

The Mayor discovered Tuesday night he apparently has not pleased quite all of his constituents, a discovery made as he prepared to drive from his home to City Hall.

where two traffic cases awaited his court.

While Circleville's first citizen was watching a TV program in his home on Park St., someone spray-painted silver and green paint on his new auto parked in front of his house and placed sharp pieces of metal in front of each of the car's tires.

MAYOR AMEY said he entered his home at about 10:10 p. m. Tuesday and began to watch a television program. At 10:20 p. m., he said, police called to tell him two traffic cases were on tap for his court.

The Mayor said he left at about 10:30 p. m., backed his car and swung out into the street. The two rear tires went flat.

On inspection, the Mayor discovered the cause. Small, sharpened pieces of construction metal had been welded to small iron bases, and one was placed in front of each tire.

Both rear tires were punctured, but by backing up the Mayor had avoided having his front tires punctured.

Within a period of 20 minutes someone had defaced the car with what appeared to be spray paint and had placed the four spike gadgets at the tires, apparently without having been seen at it.

Investigation by city police on the malicious act Wednesday was revealing. Police learned the welding job was done by an amateur; the type of welding rod which was employed; had learned the means by which the spike bases had been cut; and were checking dealers about purchases of spray-paint cans.

Actually, the Mayor lost nothing on the deal but his time, since the auto was fully covered by insurance. A heavy coat of wax on the auto, which had been purchased less than three months ago, had kept the spray-paint from causing permanent damage.

ions for liberalized tax write-offs and for setting aside a fixed percentage of some procurement for surplus labor areas "are helpful as far as they go."

Hagerty said as much as 30 per cent of some procurement items—Army blankets, for example—might be set aside.

But Saltonstall added that the "abandonment of (Truman's) bid-matching procedure was a blow to the program."

Sen. Maybank declared that Eisenhower had turned his back "on campaign promises of state rights, more freedom for private business and greater economies in the government," and he continued:

"It's impossible for me to understand how the President, in the face of the record made in the Congress during the last session, and in the face of assurances given by the administration to the majority leader, Sen. Knowland could take such action."

HE REFERRED to this chronology of events last July:

The Senate adopted 62-25 an amendment to the defense appropriation bill forbidding the Defense Department from letting any contracts to other than a low bidder, even if a slightly higher bid came from an area with substantial unemployment, for "correcting or preventing economic dislocations."

The amendment was drastically revised in a Senate-House conference, to bar preferential treatment in cases where there was a "price differential."

When the bill returned to the Senate for final passage, Maybank again offered his amendment. But he did not press it after Knowland assured him that "I will personally take up the matter with the President of the United States, because the vote of the Senate on the question was so overwhelming that the administration should not flinch in the face of the vote by the Senate."

He referred to the original Maybank's amendment.

Knowland later said he had received from the President assurance that no contracts would be let except on a low-bid basis.

Nebraska Solon Urges Pension For Everyone Reaching Age Of 65

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Kean (R-NJ) predicted today neither the Eisenhower administration nor Congress will adopt a key Republican colleague's plan to pay Social Security pensions to almost everyone over 65.

Rep. Carl T. Curtis (R-Neb.), chairman of a Social Security subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee, outlined the far-reaching new program yesterday.

Kean, fourth-ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee, has been an Eisenhower supporter and has taken a special interest in Social Security. He said Curtis' plan would undermine the Social Security trust fund.

Curtis called in effect for pensions now for all retired persons over 65 years old, and for an increase in the monthly minimum Social Security benefit from the present $25 to $45.

He estimated this would add some five million new aged persons, 670,000 children and 150,000 widows or orphans to the Old Age Retirement and Survivors' Insurance benefit rolls, more than doubling the present number.

CURTIS SAID the new minimum would increase benefits for more than 1,700,000 aged persons, 300,000 orphans and 100,000 widows already on the rolls.

He called for tax contributions from all workers under 65, levied on all types of income. He would let the rate jump from 1 1/2 to 2 per cent in incomes up to $3,600 annually, paid by workers and employers alike, as scheduled Friday. He estimated this would bring more than 10 1/2 million doctors, lawyers, farmers, preachers and others from the present working force into the system.

His universal pension plan would end the present dual program of aid to the aged. The OASI program provides retirement or death benefits based on contributions from workers and employers.

A separate program has provided more than $1 billion annually in federal welfare grants to some 2 1/2 million aged and dependent children, based on their need. State and local governments also contribute to this program and administer it locally.

Curtis would abolish the federal portion of this program, but state and local governments could provide welfare payments to the needy if they wished.

Since the welfare program is included in the regular federal budget, while Social Security trust fund operations are not, this would give a $1 billion boost to the GOP drive to balance the regular federal budget.

"It is questionable that we can deal with all the matters floating around," Russell said, noting that presidential commissions have been working on many controversial issues.

Neal was arrested by State Patrolman Ray Hoylman and Brunson was nabbed by Miller. All three men appeared in answer to bills of information filed by County Prosecutor William Ammer.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington takes down the shutters next week. Business falls off here between Congress' departure and its return in January. So does news. It can be dull here then.

But this year had some lively moments.

Most memorable: the events touched off by Atty. Gen. Brownell's charge of Truman administration softness toward Communists.

In replying, former President Truman concentrated on Brownell but mentioned Sen. McCarthy. McCarthy then denounced Truman, criticized the Eisenhower administration, and got himself rebuked by Secretary of State Dulles and, indirectly, by President Eisenhower.

Then comparative quiet enveloped the city again although work went on in the Supreme Court and the executive departments.

When the lawmakers open up shop Wednesday all the wheels start turning again, some shrilly, some angrily, some quietly and efficiently.

The new year's work begins next Monday night, Jan. 4, when Eisenhower reports to the nation on television and radio on his first year in office.

On Thursday, Jan. 7, the day after Congress returns, Eisenhower delivers to it his State of the Union message, outlining his program.

Quickly after that he'll hand Congress his economic report, just a time when many private economists say the country faces a year of fairly mild depression, and his budget of expenses.

In spite of this load of activity, crowded into January's early days the month will be mostly one of talking while congressional committees begin hearings on legislation.

As usual, appropriations subcommittees will dig into the administration's requests for money and won't finish up their work in this field until midsummer.

And, as usual, members of Congress will be operating on two planes. In the mornings they'll take part in committee hearings on all kinds of legislation; most afternoons they'll be on the floor of House and Senate making speeches.

They'll also be making statements at public meetings and to reporters.

For many of them the statements will be doing double duty: trying to get their opinions out in public and impressing the folks back home.

In fact the floor of both houses in 1954 will resemble big hay fields with most members trying to make as much of it as they can since next November is election time for most of them.

As always it will be in the usually dreary but long days of committee hearings where Congress does its solid work, putting legislation together for debate and vote.

Forests originally covered about one-third of all the world's land areas.

Men In 1-C Face Recall For Draft

COLUMBUS (AP)—The chief of Selective Service in Ohio says a presidential executive order will result in reinduction of a number of men released from service after having served as little as one or two days of active duty.

Col. C. W. Goble, Ohio Selective Service director, referred to the executive order signed by President Eisenhower Dec. 11.

The amendment to Selective Service regulations, Col. Goble said, will remove the possibility of evasion of minimum equitable service by a small number of persons who, under the former regulations, will require a minimum of six months' service.

Under the new regulations, registrants who entered active duty in the armed forces after June 24, 1948, will be classified as 1-C only if they are separated from active duty after completion of six months of honorable service.

Col. Goble said this change will mean an estimated 2,000 to 3,000 persons throughout the country and an estimated 150 in Ohio, now classified in 1-C, will be subject to reclassification and possible induction.

Fisherman, 104, Cherishes Note

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP)—William (Dad) Eddington still is reading and rereading a holiday greeting. It is from another fisherman, considerably younger than Dad's 104 years.

It was among 300 congratulatory messages that followed newspaper pictures showing Dad, an avid angler, convalescing from a fractured hip. It said:

"I have just learned how well you are recovering from the broken hip you suffered last summer. I hope your improvement continues and that you will be able to get back to your fishing next summer. My very best wishes . . . Dwight D. Eisenhower."

Biologist Lauds Steak From Whale

LOS ANGELES (AP)—You slice it about an inch thick and fry it quickly in butter, the biologist said. What have you got? Whale steak.

"Nutritious, juicy, soft, and high in protein," went on the biologist, Dr. Raymond M. Gilmore of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Gilmore also told the Western Society of Naturalists yesterday that in creating a market for the meat lies the only hope for saving the whaling industry. He said vegetable oils have ruined the whale oil market.

Some whale meat, said Gilmore, is being shipped to Eastern markets from Norway and Iceland. It sells for 83 cents a pound, a price which can be greatly decreased if demand increases.

2 Korean Pullout Divisions Unknown

SEOUL (AP)—Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor stood in a snow-covered Korean valley today and told 8th Army soldiers he did not know what two U. S. divisions would be leaving Korea or where or when they would go.

"The decision to transfer two divisions out," he said, "was a high-level move and I do not have the details. It may be weeks or months before the transfer is made."

President Eisenhower announced recently that the two divisions would be pulled out.

Smoked and fresh hams for New Year's Day dinner head the list of specials in the nation's food stores this week.

A typical chain said it is cutting smoked ham prices by six cents a pound and fresh ham by four cents. Stores also will feature turkeys and roasting chickens, just in case you didn't get your fill at Christmas.

Meanwhile, other meat prices are tending higher. In some areas, sirloin steak, rib roast and leg of lamb are up four to six cents a pound.

Oklahoma To Vote On 3 Tollroads

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Oklahomans will decide in a special election Jan. 26 whether to authorize construction of three new toll roads.

The state's first pay-as-you-drive four-lane superhighway, the Turner Turnpike from Oklahoma City to Tulsa, was opened last May 16.

AN ELEMENTAL WHIRL

SOME WASHINGTON reporters predict that President Eisenhower will ask Congress to lift minimum wages from 75 cents an hour to 85 cents or more and institute a sliding scale aimed at an eventual minimum of $1 an hour. Also sought may be inclusion of many millions more than the 21 million now covered.

The purpose of course would be to keep purchasing power expanding to invigorate domestic markets. A domestic market falter, accompanied by declining foreign markets and increasing imports, the productive machinery slows down for lack of outlets. Thus is unemployment created.

The deplorable factor is that the federal government finds it necessary to thus intrude its authority into the day-to-day functions of business. There is all but universal agreement that the government has become too powerful. If that trend continues, the government conceivably could ultimately make all the decisions.

Perhaps this is inescapable as the nation girds to defend itself not only militarily but economically. There can be no military strength without economic strength than has a more realistic base than war spending. More and more the government seems to be making the broad economic decisions as the aftermath of 20 years of depression spending and war spending.

In a situation much of this talk of a lessening of federal power is more or less academic. The United States seems to be caught in one of those elemental whirls toward government authority. It is likely to become the outstanding characteristic of the Twentieth Century.

'THEN THERE WAS ONE'

THERE ARE SIGNS THAT the Malenkov triumvirate that took over Soviet rule after Stalin's death may soon be reduced to a one-man operation. The Kremlin ostensibly has been governed by the two remaining partners since Beria's fall from grace, but now, according to Western observers, Foreign Minister Molotov seems also to be headed for a fall.

It is noted that when the big November parades were staged in the Ukrainian, Moldavian and Armenian republics, pictures displayed of Molotov were of the same format as those of ordinary presidium members. On the other hand portraits of Malenkov and Krushchev, the party secretary (and Malenkov's brother-in-law) were king size, equalled only by those of Lenin and Stalin.

Besides the relative sizes of publicly displayed pictures, also carrying a great deal of significance in Russia, is the size of type used to print an official's name. It may be ominous that Molotov of late has been showing up in ordinary print as compared with the full capital-letter treatment meted out to Malenkov.

A club to Molotov's status may be given at the foreign ministers' conference in East Berlin next month. There can be no

These Days

Most Americans continue to be shocked that 22 American boys in Korea wish to remain in the Communist world. The number is a tiny fraction of the total number of American troops in Korea. We have been given no figures on how many American troops stationed in West Germany and Austria have gone Marxist.

There must be some. Also, we have not been informed about the estimates of between 500 and 900 Americans who have disappeared into Communist territory in China or Siberia or North Korea. Have they become Communists? What has become of them?

(Incidentally, if your son is still missing in Korea, write your Senator or Representative, and if you please, let me have a copy of the letter.)

As regards the 22 young men who choose to remain in Communist territory, why not let them have their choice without further to-do? It is absurd to say that they do not know what they do. By any calculation, they are adults. They have gone through the maturing experience of war. They must have argued the question hundreds of times in their prison whether they prefer to be Communists or Americans.

Many psychological factors and practical considerations may enter into their decision. A soldier may have hated his father or his mother; he may have been a misfit in his home community. Such a boy might be tempted to change his world.

Another might have left a girl behind who married someone else while he went a-warring. Such a young man could romanticize himself into a Werther. Or he might have recaptured his love in a companionship with a Chinese or Korean or a Russian girl who comforted him exotically.

But it is also possible that some of these young men have been converted to the Marxist church, perhaps because they have no church of their own. We register our troops as Catholics, Protestants, Jews, etc., for purposes of burial if they are killed. But this every really competent chaplain has discovered: large numbers of troops engage their first religious experience in war; that the challenge of imminent death or the pain of wounds, or the loneliness in a lost world, or the yearning for the comfort of a mother can only be requited by religion, not only by faith but almost by a personal, an intimate relationship to God that comes in prayer.

It is for this reason that the Chaplain's service is so important for the morale of our troops. There are uniformed simpletons among the brass in our armed services who do not understand what they themselves have not experienced, and they are now engaged in breaking down the Chaplain Corps. To this, I shall address myself more fully in the near future.

If we are to understand the 22, we need to know their religious background, for only then can we understand the character, the intellectual and spiritual nature of these young men. If they are altogether without a religious background, Marxist homology as contrasted with Christian theology will appeal to them.

Why limit this consideration to these 22 boys? Take such a case as George S. Wheeler. Here is a man of education and of position. In a letter to the Civil Service Commission, dated October 11, 1945, he wrote:

hope, of course, of piercing his usually inscrutable demeanor but it will be revealing if he's left to come and go as he pleases. Close attendance by an armed escort, contrarily, would indicate that Malenkov is perfectly aware that West Berlin and escape lie just over the border.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

news behind the news

WASHINGTON—Alger Hiss is barred forever by New York state statutes from even the most minor and lowliest connection with the practice of law when he completes the prison sentence given him on conviction of perjury in the Whittaker Chambers conspiracy.

This has considerable significance, in view of reports in legal circles that a job would be awaiting him on his release from the penitentiary. Because of his admitted brilliance, it was said that the former State Department official, although disbarred, would be engaged as an adviser, consultant or even a law clerk by some of his personal or professional friends.

However, Section 90, Subdivision 2, of New York's judiciary law erects the following barrier against legal employment of any lawyer disbarred on conviction of a felony:

"It shall be the duty of the appellate division to insert in each order of suspension or removal hereafter rendered a provision which shall command the attorney and counsellor-at-law thereafter to desist and refrain from the practice of law in any form, either as principal or as agent, clerk or employee of another. In addition, it shall forbid the performance of any of the following acts, to wit:

"a. The appearance as an attorney or counsellor-at-law before any court, judge, justice, board, commission or other public authority.

"b. The giving to another of an opinion as to the law or its application, or of any advice in relation thereto."

That sweeping prohibition, which has been upheld in two instances where a disbarred lawyer was employed in a minor way, bars Hiss from the law or his other specialty—government and public affairs.

NO ROOM—In commenting on

Hiss' dim prospects of employment, a distinguished Brooklyn lawyer and member of the American Bar Association's special committee on communism writes:

"There is no room in the legal profession—in any capacity—for Alger Hiss. Any lawyer in this state who would employ Hiss in his law office would be subject to discipline, possibly to the extent of disbarment.

"Whatever may be Alger Hiss' employment in the future, it will not be in the legal profession. I feel certain that what applies in New York state will apply with equal force—with or without specific statute—in every state in this country."

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

NOW THEY knew, and by her own confession. After all, there had been no record to give her away, the police said. One way you looked at it, King had died because of a nonexistent record. Now they knew... Field day for the newspaper reporters, a story with all the Elements. A story with Sex. And a picture of a pretty girl.

Charlotte blinked before the blinding flashlight bulbs. And now they knew the details of that fated Friday night. How Mrs. Morgan had arrived at the store shortly before closing time and spent the next two and a half hours dodging detection. She'd hid in stairways and behind counters and in phone booths. And in the fourth-floor washroom. Once, before Mrs. O'Rourke had seen her there, she'd gone up to check on Charlotte. Then, hearing the approach of the other charwoman, Grace, she'd gone down to the fourth floor.

Finally she'd walked back up to six. And along the aisle that bounded the Miss Manhattan department on its far side. Then she'd stationed herself in the darkened personnel office, next to King's.

It had been only a few minutes later when she'd heard cautious steps coming down the same aisle. Peering out through the glass partition she'd seen Kingsley Cummings approaching. He'd glanced around the corner and apparently seen Charlotte in the open, lighted advertising office. Then he'd disappeared into what she now assumed was the switchboard room.

Still she waited wondering, till she heard Charlotte go into King's office.

"I didn't know what she was up to, but I knew I must warn Mr. Cummings was there. I started out, but then the phone rang. I ran back to the Personnel Office, and I watched the door where Cummings was, like a cat. Still I knew when Charlotte fled, and a moment later, Mr. Cummings."

Mrs. Morgan had seen him slip like a shadow on the wall down the outer aisle. Desperate with fear, she'd run in the direction Charlotte had gone, and stood, finally, in the Miss Manhattan room—trying to get her breath, trying to grasp what was happening. Listening. Waiting.

"It was so real that I thought it couldn't be real," she said now. "None of it, especially the end."

The end. When she'd seen Charlotte creep out of the fitting room and had followed... overtaking the girl just in time to see King seize her. And to comprehend the significance of the open elevator shaft and the frenzied look on his face. "Like a drummer in a hot band," Mrs. Morgan said. "Worked up to a pitch. He meant to push Charlotte down the shaft, I had no doubt. If I had a conscious thought from that moment, I don't remember it."

Only her arms and her muscles had known what to do. Slim but surprisingly strong arms that daily lifted hundreds of pounds of heavy coats. Slim arms filled with the strength born of a mother's desperation.

Besides, she and Charlotte were two against King.

But it had been Mrs. Morgan who gave the final, fatal push.

"I might have done it though," Charlotte cried out now. "In just another minute I might have done it. I had the wish. I'm just as guilty."

And I suffer, I am punished almost as much.

Had that been why she'd taken on this burden of guilt—allowed herself to be suspected, even gone to jail in her own imaginings? This identification with her mother—was it shared guilt or shared kinship? Charlotte had been sure of only one thing; as long as she allowed herself to be suspected, she'd throw the police off the track that could lead to her mother.

So she'd allowed all the others to be suspected, too. She'd minded about Mario and Tim and Eric. Eric. She'd never see Eric again, after he'd read tomorrow morning's papers. No, this morning's.

Mrs. Morgan had wanted to confess. She'd wanted to go straight from the store to the police. But

Try, Stop Me

There's a little boy in the fifth grade at a Beverly Hills School who poses quite a problem for the teacher every day. Because his father is a movie producer with an income estimated at something like eight thousand dollars a week, the son's sense of values is not the same as the other students'. One composition he turned in, for instance, has become a collector's item in the school. It began: "This is the story about a very poor family. The father was very poor, the mother was very poor, the children were very poor, and the three butlers were the poorest of all."—Asked to recount the story of Noah in his Bible class another day, the lad began, "Well, it seems that God told Noah it was going to do some tall raining, so he'd better build himself a yacht."

"My wife has a slight impediment in her speech," admits the editor of a Louisiana newspaper. "Every hour or so she has to take time out to breathe."

A New Method Which Is Used In Checking a Male Cancer

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE same thing that makes cancer of the prostate curable, also makes for fewer cures. One of the reasons why the cure rate of this disease is low is because the tumor produces no symptoms in most instances until relatively late. However, it is the cases that do not produce any symptoms that are usually the curable cases.

In Routine Examination

It is usually detected by a physician when he does a routine examination of the patient. In this procedure, he may do a rectal examination and at that time he may feel a hard nodule in the prostate gland. If this is discovered, a sample of the tissues should be examined to determine if a cancer exists. In this early stage, many men can be cured of this type of cancer.

It has been estimated that at least three million men in this country are suffering from cancer of the prostate.

Early Symptom

One of the first symptoms of this disease may be a difficulty in urination with pain and burning. There may even be blood in the urine. Other symptoms may be pain in the bones and joints, since cancer of the prostate spreads readily through the body to the bones and joints.

Recently, some of these cases were treated with injections of radioactive gold. Since it does not spread its radioactive properties too far, it causes little damage to the surrounding tissues. Some damage to the rectum may occur. It is believed by some that the radioactive gold helps to form a thick fibrous ring around the prostate, preventing the spread of the cancer to other organs.

Other Treatments

The giving of female hormone and the removal of the prostate are usually helpful forms of treatment.

These procedures help check the spread of the disease and also remove the primary source. All in all, the outlook for patients with prostate cancer is becoming better every day if the disease is detected early enough. That is one reason why regular physical examinations, including checking of the prostate gland, are so important in the middle-aged and elderly.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Miss I. P.: I have begun to work under fluorescent lighting. I now notice that I am becoming bald. Could this type of lighting be causing it? I am a woman of twenty-four.

Answer: No, if anything, fluorescent light would stimulate the scalp rather than cause baldness, for this type of light gives off some ultraviolet rays.

Home Demonstration Group Plans Program On Textiles

The home demonstration projects for county groups during January and February are "What's New In Textiles" and "Minor Electrical Repairs." These will be supervised and taught by volunteer leaders of the Home Demonstration Agent, in accordance with methods and subject matter gained through Extension Specialists of Ohio State University.

By watching their program books and news items, homemakers can take advantage of these two projects for gaining helpful knowledge and enjoying cooperative fellowship.

There is apparently no end to efforts to develop fibers which will imitate or succeed those produced by nature. Hundreds of fibers have been given the trial and error treatment in search of The Miracle Fiber. A few have been found successful and somewhat miraculous—alone or in blends.

When Mr. and Mrs. Consumer go to buy clothing for themselves or the family, they are often so interested in the attractiveness of the garment, its style or color, that they do not always think of the practical side of the purchase until they are back home and their money is gone. Whether a garment or other item of fabric is purchased ready made or made at home, it is highly beneficial to know something of the properties of the fiber or fibers and the resulting fabric.

"Electricity is something which starts goodness knows where and ends in the same place. Nobody knows exactly what it is, because it has never stood still long enough. With it one can start a conversation or stop one permanently, cook dinner, curl hair, press trousers, blow up a battle ship, run an auto, or signal Mars."

In these modern times, with electrical appliances so popular and constantly in use, it is wise as well as economical for homemakers to develop self-confidence and learn safe practices in the use of electricity. It is a boost to her ego as well as a time and money saving measure, for the homemaker to know good and safe methods of administering minor repairs—or to determine when repair is a false economy.

New Worries Face Spartans In Rose Bowl

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Michigan State football Coach Biggie Munn had a couple of small worries to pestle him today as he prepared for his Rose Bowl showdown with UCLA. These were:

1—Michigan State won't be allowed a workout Thursday on the Rose Bowl turf.

2—Munn just realized today that probably most of the third quarter and assuredly the fourth period will be played under lights.

On the first point, Munn likes to accustom his team to any strange setting and to let them get the feel of the turf.

"I didn't think it was an unreasonable request," he said.

Munn received a polite but firm "no" and didn't make an issue of it. He was told by Lathrop Leishman, chairman of the Tournament of Rose Football Committee, that it just wasn't the custom because the field was supposed to be in top shape for the game.

On the second point, Munn realized belatedly that much of the second half of the game might be played under artificial light.

This particular MSC squad has never operated under the arcs. And white footbals aren't allowed.

UCLA has played several of its games with the artificial lighting and presumably would have a slight advantage.

Munn quickly shifted practice plans to give his team a long late afternoon and evening drill under the arcs. The last time MSC operated with the lights was in 1949 against Arizona. That score was 75-0 for Michigan State.

Football Bowl Games Aplenty Are Scheduled

NEW YORK (AP)—Television and radio fans will get a full helping of football New Year's Day with all four major bowl games on the networks. Just for good measure, they'll also be treated to the East-West Shrine game from San Francisco Saturday afternoon.

The clash of Maryland and Oklahoma in Miami's Orange Bowl will be carried by CBS radio and TV Friday with game time at 2 p. m. (EST). The Georgia Tech - West Virginia game in New Orleans' Sugar Bowl will be beamed by ABC radio and TV, and the Rice-Akron game in Dallas' Cotton Bowl will be seen and heard on NBC radio and TV. Starting time for the Sugar and Cotton Bowls is the same as the Orange Bowl, 2 p. m. (EST).

The Rose Bowl meeting of Michigan State and UCLA, starting at 5 p. m. (EST) will be carried on NBC radio and TV.

After that Friday deluge, the Saturday menu calls for East-West over Dumont TV and MBS Radio, starting at 4:30 p. m. (EST).

Findlay Winning In Hoosier Meet
TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP)—The semifinal round of the 10th annual Midwest Collegiate Basketball Tournament tonight matches Central Missouri with Northwestern Louisiana and Findlay of Ohio with Indiana State.

The Findlay Oilers led all the way last night but had to beat off a late rally to save a 79-72 victory over North Central of Illinois. Findlay had a 12-point edge going into the fourth quarter, but North Central cut it to four at 71-67 with 2:25 to play.

Herk Wolfe, 6-foot-7, 275 pound Findlay center, scored 26 points but yielded individual honors to Bill Warden of North Central, who had 31.

County Home Boy New York Visitor
The nation's great military academy at West Point and the wonders of the New York City area are high-ranking topics in the spare-time talkfests these days at Pickaway County Children's Home.

And able to give a first-hand description of both is Charles Miller, 18, one of the boys in care of the Home, who visited New York and traveled over the Hudson River region during the Christmas holidays. He was taken along on the trip as a guest by local friends and returned here early this week.

Commenting on young Miller's enthusiasm after his return, Home Superintendent Winfield Koch said:

"I've heard more about West Point and New York City in 10 minutes than I could write about in a year."

Irwin Prepares Elementary Test
Pickaway County seventh and eighth graders have completed an extensive "every pupil" test in which an Ashville teacher played a principal role.

One portion of the test, American history from 1860 on, was prepared for youngsters throughout Ohio by Edwin Irwin, elementary school principal at Ashville school. Ashville pupils and other youngsters throughout the state completed the test in early December.

Insight Into Communism's Hold On Soviet Youth Given

Editor's Note—William L. Ryan, in a three-month stay in the Soviet Union, talked to scores of Russians without benefit of interpreters. He traveled 6,000 miles without going on any of the "escorted tours" arranged for most foreigners visiting the Soviet Union. Here, in another of his uncensored stories, he gives an insight into communism's hold on youth.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Foreign News Analyst

"What do a Russian girl and boy talk about when they go out for an evening on the town?"

Mystification prompted this question to a young Communist-reared woman. I had noted Russians in a restaurant attempting to have a good time and making a pretty glum affair of it. They just seemed to sit and stare at each other.

"Oh," she said, "there are lots of things to talk about."

"What, for example? You are married. Your husband must have courted you. What did you talk about?"

"Oh," she repeated. "There are many things. There's socialist competition, for example."

This is partly nonsense, of course. Basically, young men and women in Russia discuss many of the same things that couples elsewhere talk about. Nevertheless, their attitude toward life shows the effects of sealed off, effective training. The Communist party's system of education from nursery onward captures the choice core of a generation.

The Soviet Communist party puts the accent on youth though many youngsters escape the rigid mold. The party is interested principally in talented youngsters who will be indoctrinated and trained to form a hard core from which party leaders of tomorrow will be selected and trained.

Every Soviet town has its house or "palace" of Young Pioneers. Theoretically, all Soviet children are members of the Young Pioneers. But those who frequent the palaces are the one who get special attention until they resemble little robots, responding automatically to commands. The stress is upon development of talent, party education and discipline.

During a trip to a half dozen Soviet republics, I visited some of these Pioneer palaces. The one in Tashkent, capital of the Uzbek S.S.R., seems fairly typical. I went there one Sunday unannounced, and after some argument with the guard at the gate and showing my impressive Red police pass, I was allowed to go in. I was a problem to the woman in charge, but she took me in tow for a guided tour. Fortunately for her, things had been arranged in anticipation of visits from a number of "delegations" including Brazilians, Indonesians and Mongolians.

There were no more than 50 children in the building, with an equal number in the yard outside. The rest of the children of Tashkent (population 600,000) were about other pursuits in the streets and parks. To the palace—a long, rambling two-story building surrounded by a slogan-decked fence—were the cream of the talent the Pioneers could boast in an equal number of young Uzbeks and young Russians. Obediently, they awaited quietly the guests' arrival. They were all done up in their Sunday best, all wearing red neckerchiefs symbolizing the Young Pioneer organization.

I was shown the "Kabinet," where children ranging in age from about 7 to 14 discuss Young Pioneer business gravely—like a "little government," the guide said. Such a meeting apparently already had been arranged.

In another room, 18 boys and girls bent over chessboards playing a simultaneous match with a local chess master.

In other rooms I was shown children's handicraft, painting and sculpture, some of it remarkably good, and their biological and zoological collections. A class of children in costume was learning Uzbek folk dances. A group of three young accordionists used Italian and German instruments under an instructor's eye.

The children were extremely shy with me, and later, with the delegations. There were no bubbling, rambunctious kids such as one might expect to find in that age bracket in any large group. Somehow they seemed spiritless. The talent was there, beyond question, and the training was there, but the childhood was not. Gravely they did everything they were told to do without hesitation or questions.

The Brazilian delegation, ushered in by a Portuguese-speaking guide, was obviously impressed. Fresh from the Communist World Federation of Trade Unions Congress in Vienna, the Brazilians were expressively enthusiastic about Soviet youth. They gave the impression that they took these children as typical of all Communist-reared youth, although just outside in the streets, as in the streets of any Soviet capital, many a young tough can be seen—loud and rowdy cigarette smoking boys who already have begun to scratch for a living. Children of the better class

Communists are shielded from such influences.

The process begins in the nursery. Since most Soviet mothers work children of 3 or 4 are sent to "Dyetskayas"—nurseries—to be cared for and trained during the working day by Russian nurses and teachers. In any Soviet streets, children can be seen in groups of 50 or more going through their paces with teachers watching. They are molded into the Russian and Communist mold.

They will grow up as Uzbek Russians, Tadjik Russians, Kazakh Russians, Azerbaijani Russians. Since all their affairs will be in the Russian language, as the years go by they will have less and less to fear for their own.

Shielded from information from the outside world which does not fit into the Communist pattern, the children become obedient servants of a Communist society.

Many escape the rigid pattern, however. As the Soviet middle class continues to grow, more and more others are attempting to give up working so they may rear their children themselves.

A tremendous amount of attention is given to children by the Communist party and Soviet government. The education network is growing constantly because no highly industrialized nation can hope to survive in today's world without a broad base of education. But Communist education comes first.

"I have been in the service of the U. S. Government for more than eleven years, since August 1934. During this period I have served in the National Labor Relations Board, the Department of Labor, the War Production Board, the Office of Economic Warfare and its successor, the Foreign Economic Administration.

"During the past eleven months I have served overseas in the uniform of the United States Army with the assimilated rank of Colonel. Officials of all of these agencies familiar with my record, including my Commanding General in Berlin, have expressed their readiness to support me against any accusations that may have been made reflecting on my character or loyalty. And I want to take this occasion personally to assert my absolute allegiance to the United States and its democratic form of government."

Despite this affirmation, George S. Wheeler is now somewhere behind the Iron Curtain, having renounced the United States. What has caused him to change his views?

What attraction does Marxism have for such a man that the freedom of the United States does not have?

Cop Radio Carries Air Force Talk

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Dispatchers on the city police radio system were going about their work last night when an unfamiliar voice came out of a loudspeaker: "Altitude 3,000 feet. Ceiling zero. Visibility zero. Coming in for a landing. Roger. Three MIGs at 3 o'clock. Watch 'em, Skipper."

The voice stopped when a dispatcher asked for the squad number and location of the radio car. But it came back on the air intermittently with Air Force talk and inquiries as to lunchtime.

After checking unused radio cars in the police parking lot and city garage, the dispatchers sent out the message:

"All cars—watch for a drunk in an unlocked squad car."

Safety Committee Reports Temperature Affects Skids

Melting Point Is Worst For Ice Traction

Chains Discovered Best For Avoiding Sliding, Slipping

Does temperature affect an auto's stopping ability on ice?

Yes—and that answer comes with authoritative emphasis from a group of engineers and automotive experts who braved chill winds on a frozen Wisconsin lake to find answers for the National Safety Council's committee on winter driving hazards.

When the temperature was zero, the average stopping distance on glare ice from 20 mph was 110 feet. But at 32 degrees—the melting point—it took 250 feet to stop at the same speed—a difference of 140 feet or almost a quarter of a block.

"The driver who starts out on an icy road early in the morning while it's still cold finds traction and stopping ability fairly good," said Ralph A. Moyer, traffic research engineer for the University of California and chairman of the committee. "But as the sun comes out and the temperature rises, he doesn't realize that the ice will become much more treacherous. When he finds he can't stop in time to avoid an accident, it's often too late."

THE COMMITTEE, in two new booklets summarizing its test findings, lists temperature changes as one of the three most important reasons for winter traffic accidents. The others are reduced visibility and inadequate traction.

In addition to describing effective winter driving techniques, the booklets evaluate the mechanical helps available to motorists.

Tire chains are rated as the best self-help, with tests proving their ability to cut braking distance in half on either snow or ice and to increase pulling traction four to seven times.

Reinforced tire chains, so-called because cross chains are reinforced with projecting teeth or cleats, are recommended because of their power to resist side skids as well as to provide stop-and-go traction.

The committee also tested 25 different specialized tires of the snow-lug or winterized type. The conclusion was that, while some of the tires had advantages under certain conditions, their overall improvement was not great enough to warrant less care or precaution when driving on slippery surfaces and their performance was far below that of chains.

Stabilizing attachments—often termed "inertia" or "gyro" anti-skid devices—which are installed under the rear frame of the car were tested by both expert and average drivers. The tests failed to prove that the devices were effective in preventing skidding on ice and snow.

UNIT CHAINS—sometimes called emergency chains—were tested by the committee. Consisting of three or four units strapped individually to a tire, the chains gave better traction than bare tires but were inferior to full chains.

The committee even warned that skidding is "likely to be caused by the frictional forces developed when one unit chain on one tire is in contact with the ice and on the other side of the vehicle only the unprotected tire area between the unit chains is in contact with the ice."

The booklets also offer advice on how to use the brakes when stopping on ice, how to start in second gear and with automatic transmissions, how to avoid skids due to oversteering, and other safe winter driving tips.

Single copies of either booklet—"Here Are Winter Facts for Passenger Car Drivers" or "Safe Winter Driving Facts for Truck Drivers"—may be obtained without charge by writing Committee on Winter Driving Hazards, National Safety Council, 425 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 11, Ill.

Hospital Plan Enrollment To Begin Jan. 7

Circleville's Junior Chamber of Commerce has completed arrangements with Central Hospital Service, the Blue Cross Plan, to sponsor a community enrollment in Circleville and Pickaway County to be held January 7 and 8 with headquarters in Kochheiser's Hardware store.

Ed Frericks, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, is cooperating with representatives from Blue Cross to further the movement. Enrollments will be received by Blue Cross field representatives, who will be at Kochheiser's to answer questions and take applications.

According to Ralph W. Jordan, executive vice-president of the plan, Blue Cross hospital service is available to all employed persons.

There are two classifications of eligibility.

1. Any person employed in a group of five or more may enroll in a pay-roll deduction group.

2. SELF-employed persons including farmers or those working where there are less than five employees, may enroll in the community non-group plan.

"Blue Cross is nation-wide," Jordan points out. "More than 45 million persons in the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico have their hospital bills paid in case of sickness or accident injury. In Pickaway County alone, 4,000 persons have Blue Cross protection."

"Blue Cross is a voluntary non-profit plan, designed to provide low cost prepaid hospital care for all enrolled persons and their families."

This enrollment carries the endorsement of Berger hospital, Margaret S. Bradbury, administrator; the Pickaway County Medical Society, Dr. Ned Griner, president; and the Circleville Chamber of Commerce, Wes Edstrom, president.

300 Christmas Cards Delayed

CHICAGO (AP)—Delivery of nearly 300 Christmas cards has been delayed but Postal Inspector F. W. Baleiko is working to get them distributed—before New Year's, he hopes.

Baleiko yesterday began matching 282 letters and Christmas cards to 282 envelopes in an unscrambling made necessary by Willie Brown, 30, a temporary mail carrier. Postal inspectors said Brown's wife said he came home Christmas Eve and forced her to open each envelope. He was charged with embezzling and detaining and obstructing delivery of mail.
